AMUSEMENTS.

The DePew-Burdette Stock Company played to a packed house last night. It gives us pleasure to say that this show is far superior to many of the popular-priced concerns on the road. They surpass competitors on several points, chief among which are the special scenery, fine costumes and first-rate acting. The train robbery pictures were good, equalling anything Lyman Howe put on. "The Midnight Special" to-night. — Maysville Bulletin.

This excellent company will be at the Grand all of next week.

—Chauncey Alcott, the comedian and sweet singer, will be at the Lexington Opera House next Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 11 and 12. He will present his latest and most successful play, "A Romance of Athlone." Mr. Alcott will sing all of his latest songs. The interurban cars will wait until after the performance. Orders for seats sent to Manager Scott will receive prompt attention.

—"My Wife's Family," which was at the Grand Tuesday night was one of the best farce comedy companies ever in this city. As usual, a small house was present, as is generally the case when the management has booked a first-class attraction. The two comedians, Harry Linden and Hal Stephens, were the best "that ever happened." There was not a dull moment during the entire performance. Every member of the company deserve special mention.

SEASONABLE GOODS. — All seasonable goods such as Oysters, Fish, Celery, Cranberries—in fact everything good for this season of the year can be found always fresh at my grocery.

The Blue Licks Sunday.

The Covington Blue Licks and the Paris Blues will play a game of base ball at Bacon's Park on Sunday. This will be the fourth game played between the two teams this season, and each of the three previous games were fine exhibitions of ball playing, the Blue Licks coming off victorious twice and Paris once. The game Sunday before last, which resulted in a score of 1 to 0 in favor of the visitors, was a fast and interesting as you will see anywhere, and the Blue Licks come to us this time with additional strength, while Paris will have a strong team in the field to battle against them.

Everyone who loves base ball should go and see this game as the close of the season is near at hand and only a few more games can be played before the inclement weather sets in, when this most appreciated out-door sport will be set aside until the coming spring. Go, and enjoy it while you can, for the winter months are long and dreary.

Fine Lot of Cattle Sold.

The Hamilton Farm Company, composed of George G. and J. Carroll Hamilton, of Bath county, have just sold to L. Joseph, of Cincinnati, 260 export cattle. Their total weight amounted to slightly over 200,000 pounds. The Messrs. Hamilton received something over $16,000 for the lot.

Broke Three Records.

Grace Bond, J. Y. Galtcomb's little bay filly that surprised the talent last year by winning the two-year-old division of the Kentucky Futurity, at Lexington, repeated her performance Tuesday by winning the three-year-old division in 2:09 1/4, and in so doing she broke three world's records for time and put herself in the class of Ferenzo, the only horse that ever won both divisions of the classic stake. The stake was worth $14,000, of which $10,000 went to Grace Bond. The popularity of her victory was attested by the tumultuous applause which went up as she finished a short head in front of Alta Axworthy under the wire.

Capt. John S. Conn Dead.

Capt. John Scott Conn, a distinguished Confederate soldier and former resident of this county, died at the home of his niece, Mrs. T. M. Swann, in Louisville, Tuesday, in his 80th year.

Capt. Conn was born in Bourbon county April 25, 1815, the son of Catherine Webb and Joseph Conn. His mother and father died while he was an infant, and he was taken to Chillicothe, O., where he made his home with his uncle, Dr. Jas. Webb, who was the father of Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes.

Returning to Kentucky as a young man, he was graduated at Bacon College, one of Kentucky's early institutions, at Harrodsburg, but not now in existence. He established himself in the practice of law in Bourbon and Fayette counties.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Confederate army, and later became Captain in Col. Richard Gano's Regiment of Morgan's Brigade. He was captured and held prisoner at Camp Douglas. When offered his freedom if he would take the oath of allegiance, he indignantly refused.

He was never reconstructed, and always declined to take part in any Confederate reunions or other celebrations, holding aloof on the ground that he "could never jolly over his defeat."

After the war Capt. Conn settled at Centerville, this county, and later removed to Lexington and Louisville, but up to the time of his death retained his voting place at Centerville. The day before every election he would be seen on the streets of Paris enroute to Centerville to vote.

He was buried in the Lexington Cemetery Wednesday.

Summary of Crop Bulletin.

The crop bulletin for the week ending October 6, says: "The sowing of wheat has progressed fairly well, but in some parts the ground was too wet to work. Early sown fields are coming up nicely. If favorable weather prevails, a large acreage will be sown."

"Tobacco is nearly all cut and housed. It is generally reported to be curing nicely, but there is some complaint of house-burning. The acreage was much below the average, but the yield and quality as a whole are good."

"Corn cutting advanced very well, but there is considerable not quite ready for the knife. It is very irregular, some fields showing the finest crops for years, while others are very light. It is not turning out quite as good as was expected, and as a whole will be somewhat below the average."

W. C. T. U. Adjourns.

The Kentucky W. C. T. U. closed its twenty-fourth annual convention at Mt. Sterling, Tuesday night. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Frances Beauchamp, Lexington; Vice President, Mrs. Mary W. FANATICAL BRAVERY.

Japs Attempt to Take a Hill and Are Swept Down in Masses.

Later the Russians Were Enticed From Their Shelters and the Japs Worked Havoc Among Them—An Appalling Scene.

London, Oct. 4.—The Daily Telegraph's Nagasaki correspondent, cabling under date of September 25, says:

"Terrible artillery conflicts are adding to the horrors of the situation at Port Arthur. On September 22 and 23 the Russians made sorties against positions held by the Kanagawa regiment, and desperate fighting ensued. The Japanese force was practically annihilated, only one non-commissioned officer and 11 men remaining alive out of the 4,000 who went into the engagement.

"The Japanese tunnel into Port Arthur was completed on September 24 and was immediately used. The result is unknown."

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Sakaroff, dated October 30:

"At dawn of October 1 a squadron of Japanese cavalry twice attempted to break through the line of advance posts of Cossacks of the guard in the district between Khankhuandla and Fengtiapu. Both attempts were unsuccessful. Two squadrons of our cavalry reinforced the advance posts and the Japanese dispersed.

"Towards noon the same day one battalion of the Japanese advance guard with two or three squadrons of cavalry, renewed the offensive movement against a regiment of Cossacks. The firing lasted until nightfall. Gen. Mistchenko sent reinforcements to the aid of the Cossacks and towards evening the enemy was repulsed at all points, the whole line retreating towards Siakhonkhetzy, pursued by our cavalry."

"In the positions abandoned by the Japanese our Cossacks found a number of cartridges and medical stores, and also a few dead horses. We had two officers and two Cossacks wounded. The same day a Japanese force of one battalion and a half and a squadron of cavalry attacked in three divisions our outposts between the Hun river and the railway. Towards evening this movement was checked with the help of another company, which reinforced the outpost. One Cossack was killed and one wounded.

"One Russian patrol dispersed two Japanese patrols in the vicinity of Tchjanton, on the right bank of the Hun river, taking three Japanese prisoners.

"Another Russian patrol, sent in an easterly direction, discovered Tawang-hau Pass occupied by 200 Chinese bandits, commanded by Japanese officers. During the reconnaissance one Cossack was killed."

London, Oct. 6.—The Daily Telegraph's Chefoo correspondent says that on September 24-25 the Japanese made repeated and recklessly brave attempts to capture High Hill at Port Arthur. Owing to the destruction of earthworks their advance was completely unprotected and under the rays of the searchlight the Russian machine guns swept them down in masses.

"More troops, however, came on with fanatical bravery," the correspondent adds, "leaping over the bodies of their dead comrades. Then the Russians, emboldened by their success, sortied. The Japanese replied with machine guns. It was the first time the Japanese had been able to entice the Russians from their shelters and they worked terrible havoc among them.

"The scene next morning was appalling. The hillside was strewn with mangled Russian and Japanese bodies, some of them gripped with ghastly realism. Boulders were trickling with blood.

"A brief message was received today. It is on torn paper, in Chinese, and signed by Gen. Stoessel. It states that all had been quiet since September 25 and that the Japanese again had asked for and were refused a truce to bury their dead.

"An official Japanese statement admits the repulse and confesses the necessity of a resort to a passive siege. 'Enteric fever has broken out in the garrison at Port Arthur.'

Berlin, Oct. 6.—A dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Mukden says: "Gen. Kuropatkin has expressed a firm determination to avail himself of this favorable season of the year for military action. Everything points to a coming revenge for Liao Yang. The officers and men hope that the period of retreats is past and that they will be led against the enemy. The Japanese undoubtedly intended September 27 to attack in three columns from the collieries at Yantai, along the imperial road, but they desisted when they discovered that the Russians fronting them numbered 60,000 men."

Increased Number of Emigrants.

Vienna, Oct. 6.—A dispatch from Flume reports a great increase in the number of emigrants going to America by the Cunard line. There are now 3,000 awaiting passage. The authorities are unable to find accommodations for them.

To Enter the Naval Academy.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 6.—Mr. Kitaki, an 18-year-old scion of a prominent Japanese family, has arrived in Annapolis with the intention of entering the naval academy as soon as the arrangements can be made.

THE EPISCOPALIANS.

A Most Important Conclave Held in Boston.

Bishop Doane Pleaded for Widening Churches' Sphere—Believes the Primacy of the Bishop of Rome Should be Recognized.

Boston, Oct. 5.—What is considered by the leading bishops and lay deputies as the most important conclave of Episcopalians ever held in this country was formally opened in this city Wednesday when the triennial convention assembled in Emanuel church. Before the opening session a service was held in Trinity church at which Lord Archbishop of Canterbury and prelates from four continents were present. Nearly 100 bishops were in the solemn procession which preceded the service. The preacher was Rt. Rev. William Croswell Doane, D.D., LL.D., bishop of Albany, N. Y. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the first occupant of the chair of St. Augustine, to attend a convention of the Episcopal church in this country, arrived from New York on a special train, which reached the city from New York Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Davidson was accompanied by J. Pierpont Morgan, who is a deputy from New York.

Tuesday night Amory Lawrence, of this city, tendered a banquet to the English primates at the Tuilleries.

A number of matters of the first importance are to be acted upon, including the question of changing the name of the church and that of altering the divorce canon to prevent the remarriage of any person whose partner is still living.

Boston, Oct. 6.—The feature of Wednesday in the convention of the Episcopal church was the plea of Bishop Doane, of Albany, N. Y. He thought an attempt should be made to find the starting point of disagreement between the churches and thus be in a position to reach a better understanding with the church of Rome and the various Protestant bodies.

The recognition of papal supremacy, he declared, was impossible, but he thought that the church might readily recognize the primacy of the bishop of Rome on account of the antiquity of the Roman see.

TO PROHIBIT POLYGAMY.

Methodist Missionary Women Favor Congressional Action.

Denver, Col., Oct. 6.—The Women's Home Missionary society of the Methodist church went on record in favor of congressional action against polygamy. A resolution introduced by Mrs. F. A. Aiken, of Cincinnati, recording secretary, calling upon congress to submit to the people an amendment to the constitution of the United States prohibiting the practice of polygamy was unanimously adopted amid cheers, and Mrs. Aiken was accorded a marked demonstration of approval.

THE FIRST SNOW.

Heavy Gale Is Raging on Lake Superior, and Shipping Damaged.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 6.—The first snow of the season was falling here Wednesday night. A heavy gale was raging on Lake Superior. The steamer Sitka of the Gilchrist fleet, which cleared from Marquette Tuesday night, ore laden for Toledo, ran aground near Grand Marais Wednesday and threatens to be a total loss. The steamer Hunter, of the Booth line, caught fire near Grand Marais Wednesday and was burned to the water's edge.

A Shortage of Cars.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 6.—The shortage of cars in the Pittsburg district is becoming serious. Sixteen mines of the Pittsburg Coal Co. were compelled to shut down Wednesday owing to the shortage.

La Follette Wins.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 6.—La Follette wins in the supreme court decision of the Wisconsin republican factional case, which was to determine whether the La Follette ticket or the Spooner faction ticket should go on the ballot.

A Military Wedding.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 6.—Miss Mabel Donovan, daughter of Col. John Donovan, of St. Joseph, and Lieut. Douglas McCaskey, Fourth Infantry, U. S. A., were married here Wednesday night. It was a military wedding and many officers of the army attended.

Brigands in the War.

London, Oct. 6.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent, in traveling between Simintin and Kinchau, interviewed Chinese bandit chiefs, who affirmed that there are 10,000 brigands engaged actively at the theater of war.

THE TUBERCULOSIS CONGRESS.

Dr. Fred Kohlbenehler States That Consumption Can Not Be Cured.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—That phthisis of the lungs can not be cured was the statement made by Dr. Fred Kohlbenehler, of St. Louis, who explained the discoveries of Prof. Otto Von Shroen, of the Royal university of Naples. Prof. Von Shroen was unable to be present and sent his paper to be read. Prof. Von Shroen explained that a patient suffering from consumption could live for years in apparent health, but under favorable circumstances the germ of the disease would become active and destroy the lung tissues. In cases of phthisis of the lungs, the professor said, he had discovered a new germ, which, together with the germ that had hitherto been known to doctors to destroy all animal life, existed only in the cases of phthisis of the lungs.

THE M'KINLEY MEMORIAL.

All of the Ten Designs Are in the Hands of the Jury.

Canton, O., Oct. 6.—All of the ten designs for the McKinley memorial are in the hands of the jury, composed of Walter Cook and Daniel French, of New York, and R. S. Peabody, of Boston. E. W. Bloomingdale, of the committee on design, writes that all the members of the committee had been heard from excepting Cornelius N. Bliss, and as soon as word is received from him a meeting of the trustees will be called. The members of the committee on design are: Gov. Franklin Murphy, of New Jersey; William McConway, Pittsburg, Pa.; Cornelius N. Bliss, and E. W. Bloomingdale, New York, and William A. Lynch, Canton. According to Secretary Hartzell, the meeting will probably be called in a few days. At this session it is officially stated, the design will undoubtedly be chosen and the architect employed. The meeting will probably take place in New York.

A WOMAN'S STORY.

Says Her Companion Killed a Man in An Abandoned House.

Holden, Mo., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Anna J. Bentley, whose home is in Tennessee, Wednesday took Sheriff Hughes, of Cass county, to an abandoned house near here, where the dead body of a man was found in a well. Mrs. Bentley told the sheriff that she had witnessed the man killed four months ago.

The body was that of Carl Miller, and Mrs. Bentley states that he was killed by a man with whom she was traveling from St. Louis to Kansas in a buggy. She declares that at Warrensburg, Mo., they met Miller and that as he had a team of horses and a large wagon they induced him to allow them to accompany him as he was driving in their direction.

Mrs. Bentley says after Miller had been killed her companion declared that he would also kill her unless she swore not to reveal the crime during her life.

OWING TO HARD TIMES.

Fifty Thousand People Are Facing Starvation in Manchester.

London, Oct. 6.—At a meeting of the Manchester city council Wednesday it was announced that, owing to the hard times and depression in the cotton industries, 50,000 people in the poorer parts of the city were practically on the verge of starvation.

Similar conditions prevail in London and other large cities of the United Kingdom where the winter is expected to be one of the hardest in many years for the poorer classes.

THE DAVIS MONUMENT.

The Memorial Association Has $68,403.30 in the Treasury.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Edgar D. Taylor, of Richmond, Va., treasurer of the Jefferson Davis Memorial association, reported that there was a balance of $67,403.30 in the treasury. The convention immediately added $1,000 to the fund. The city of Richmond telegraphed that it would donate the site for the Jefferson Davis monument and a Richmond man telegraphed that he would donate $100 annually until the monument is completed.

Rev. F. E. Miller Dead.

New York, Oct. 6.—Rev. Franklin E. Miller, of the First Presbyterian church, Paterson, N. J., is dead from a cancerous growth in the stomach. Mr. Miller was born in Cincinnati in 1843 and was graduated from Miami university. He served in the civil war as captain of a colored company.

Famous Dossett Tunnel.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 6.—Daylight has gone through the famous Dossett tunnel, on the Knoxville, La Follette & Jellico railroad, and 93 per cent. of "the heading" has been removed. Trains will be running through by January 1.

Georgia State Election.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 6.—Elections of state and county officers, members of the legislature, judges and solicitors were held in every county in Georgia Wednesday. There was practically no opposition to the democratic candidates.

Called on the President.

Washington, Oct. 6.—President Roosevelt received a call from Don Carlos Pellegrini, former president of the republic of Argentina. Dr. Pellegrini is one of the distinguished statesmen of South America.

THE PEACE CONGRESS.

Almost a Demand For Institution of Peace Between Nations.

Suggestion Was Advanced That Some Collective Movement Might Be Made to Induce Russia and Japan to Cease Hostilities.

Boston, Oct. 5.—A general supplication, coupled with a demand, almost for the institution of peace between nations of the world, was the keynote Tuesday of the first deliberative session of the 13th International Peace Congress. Delegates from the great countries of the globe, all prominent in their home lands, engaged in the proceedings, giving to the occasion all the dignity and importance of a momentous international assembly.

A feature of the opening session was the receipt of an elaborate report from the International Peace Bureau for 1904, in which was reviewed what had been attained in the direction of peace by the peace workers of the world during the year passed, and also was set forth the present war conditions of the world necessitating correctionary measures by those desiring the establishment of universal concord. The suggestion was made that some collective movement might be made to induce the Russo-Japanese belligerents to return to peace. Edwin D. Mead, the chairman of the organization committee of the congress, delivered the opening address of the meeting, speaking an earnest word in favor of the reduction of great navies, and a general disarmament among nations.

Boston, Oct. 6.—Resolutions intended to bring about, if possible, an end to the Russo-Japanese war were adopted at the meeting of the International Peace congress. By the terms of these resolutions the congress will address an appeal to the emperors of Russia and Japan to terminate the struggle, and each of the powers signatory to The Hague convention will be formally requested to press upon Russia and Japan the importance of putting an end to the present war.

It was also voted that the resolutions referring to friendly intervention by the powers be presented to President Roosevelt by a committee of the congress.

The resolutions were passed after a lengthy discussion in which many of the most prominent foreign delegates participated.

During the discussion Delegate William R. Cremer, of England, took occasion, while favoring the declarations, to characterize the treaty between England and Japan as a blunder, and to charge that this treaty doubtless had much to do in bringing on the Russo-Japanese war. Thereupon Great Britain's policy of being a party to the treaty was vigorously defended by Col. Bryce Jones, M. P.

The deliberative proceedings of the day took on an added interest from the fact that a leading Hindoo, Baba Bharati, was introduced to speak as the representative of his country. The most intense applause that has ever been evoked thus far during the convention greeted the Hindoo, who, dressed in the costume of his people, delivered a passionate speech, in excellent English, denouncing on the one hand the attempt of Christianity to thrust Christianity upon India as its religion, and the policy of the English people of India of invading Tibet.

It was voted during the session to refer the subject of a reconciliation of France and Germany on the Alsace-Lorraine question to the Berne bureau for study by a special committee.

PETER SELLS DEAD.

The Well Known Showman Succumbed to Apoplexy.

Columbus, O., Oct. 6.—Peter Sells, 55, the well known showman, died at his home in this city of apoplexy. He was stricken six weeks ago. He, with his brothers, Ephraim, Allen and Lewis, established the Sells Bros. show in 1872, the aggregation traveling across the country in wagons. He had been in the show business continuously since, up to the time of his death, he retaining his interest when the Sells Bros. show was consolidated with the Forepaugh shows in 1896. Only one of the four brothers, Lewis Sells, survives.

Senator Hoar's Will.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 6.—The will of Senator George F. Hoar was filed Wednesday. It makes no public bequests, dividing his property between his son and daughter, Rockwood Hoar and Miss Mary Hoar, and giving his Asnebunskit estate in Paxton to his granddaughter. The will is dated January 8, 1904.

Battleship Ohio In Commission.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The battleship Ohio was placed in commission at San Francisco Tuesday with Capt. L. C. Logan in command. The Ohio will make a short cruise along the Pacific coast to shake down her machinery and ultimately will be attached to the Asiatic fleet.

To Grant Provincial Autonomy.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, writing to Premier Haultain, of the Northwest territories, says that after the general elections, if his government is sustained he will grant provincial autonomy to the Northwest territories.

Gift to Smith College Students.

Northampton, Mass., Oct. 6.—Frank H. Allen, of Moline, Ill., has made a gift of property valued at $30,000 for a recreation field for Smith college students. The property includes 30 acres of land in the hands of the city.

THOUGHT SHE WOULD DIE.

Mrs. S. W. Marine, of Colorado Springs, Began to Fear the Worst. Doan's Kidney Pills Saved Her.

Mrs. Sarah Marine, of 438 St. Urain St., Colorado Springs, Colo., writes: "I suffered for three years with severe backache. The doctors told me my kidneys were affected and prescribed medicines for me, but I found that it was only waste of time and money and take them and began to fear that I would never get well. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. Within a week after I began using them I was so much better that I decided to keep up the treatment, and when I had used a little over two boxes I was entirely well. I have now enjoyed the best of health for more than four months, and words can but poorly express my gratitude."

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boesche's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup; so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and soothing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large size 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

HENRY C. PAYNE DEAD.

The Postmaster General Expired Early Tuesday Evening.

Funeral Services Will Be Held in Washington Friday, After Which the Remains Will Be Taken to Milwaukee For Burial.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Henry C. Payne, postmaster general of the United States, a member of the national republican committee, a stalwart of his party, with the history of which both in his home state and nationally he has been identified for many years, died at his apartments at the Arlington hotel at 6:10 o'clock Tuesday night, aged 60 years. The death and its cause was announced in the following official bulletin issued by the attending physicians:

"The postmaster general died at 6:10 p. m. He died peacefully without a struggle. Cause of death was disease of mitral valve and dilation of the heart. (Signed) P. M. Rixey, G. Lloyd Magruder, C. T. Grayson."

Mr. Payne had been in poor health for at least two years, but his last illness covered only seven days, an attack of heart trouble last week precipitating the end at a time when, after a rest, he seemed to have recovered a small measure of his vitality, impaired by years of arduous labor. Death came after nearly six hours of unconsciousness.

The last official caller to inquire as to Mr. Payne's condition was President Roosevelt, and he had been gone only about ten minutes when the stricken member of his cabinet expired. Secretary Hay had called at the Payne apartments a few minutes before the president made his visit. Neither entered the sick room. As Mr. Roosevelt was leaving about 6 o'clock he spoke feelingly of Mr. Payne to the newspaper men gathered in front of the hotel as "The sweetest, most lovable and most trustful man I ever knew." Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her brother, Capt. Cowles, also was a caller at the family apartments of the Paynes during the late afternoon.

Around Mr. Payne's bedside at the time of his death was his devoted wife, Rev. Dr. Dunlap, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church; Maj. and Mrs. W. S. Cameron, of Jamestown, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Cameron, of Milwaukee; Charles L. Jones and Miss Louise Jones, relatives; Private Secretary Whitney, Miss Marie Barbieri, an old companion of Mrs. Payne's; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Mason, of Washington, old time friends of Mr. and Mrs. Payne, and the faithful colored messenger at the department of the postmaster general.

When the postmaster general had breathed his last Dr. Magruder led Mrs. Payne out of the room. It was stated that she had stood up bravely under the heavy strain.

The last day had been one during which practically all hope had been abandoned for some hours. The approach of dissolution began during the noon hour when the sick man lost consciousness and no longer recognized those whom he had attempted to cheer during his illness by saying to them that he was all right. When Mrs. Payne saw that the end was near she summoned Rev. Dr. Dunlap, of St. John's Episcopal church, and at her request he read at the bedside of the dying man Psalm 130, "Out of the deep," and then repeated the prayers the Episcopal church provides shall be read at the bed of those about to pass away.

Funeral services will be held at St. John's Episcopal church, this city, next Friday morning, and at 3:15 that afternoon the body will be taken to the Pennsylvania railroad station and placed aboard the private car of President A. J. Earling, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who tendered the use of the car and announced that it would be here by Wednesday morning. The remains should arrive at Milwaukee Saturday evening and services will be held next Sunday at the All Saints Episcopal church there.

PAYNE'S SUCCESSOR.

It is Probable That Mr. Cortelyou Will Assume the Duties.

Washington, Oct. 5.—In succession to Mr. Payne, George Bruce Cortelyou, former secretary of the department of Commerce and labor, and now chairman of the republican national committee, will become postmaster general about December 1. Mr. Cortelyou's appointment as head of the post office department was determined on several months ago by President Roosevelt when Mr. Payne indicated to the president his desire to retire from the department on account of the precarious state of his health. Mr. Payne would have resigned the portfolio long ago had it not been for the pending investigation of the affairs of the department. In the interim the responsibilities of directing the affairs of the post office department will evolve on Mr. Wynne.

BARTHOLDI DEAD.

The Famous Sculptor of "Liberty Enlightening the World" Passes Away.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Frederick Auguste Bartholdi, the sculptor, died at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning.

His American works, besides the statue of Liberty, include the figures of Washington and Lafayette decorating the Place des Etats Unis here, the Bartholdi fountain, in the botanical garden at Washington and the bronze group of the Leisures of Peace, in New York.

The Temps, of which Bartholdi was one of the directors, says the death of Bartholdi and Geromo removes the greatest of modern sculptors and relates how Bartholdi's statue of Liberty was the Apotheosis of France's role since the revolution, which led the French government to offer the statue to the sister republic as a pledge of fraternal devotion to Liberty.

IN A STREET DUEL.

A Milwaukee Man, a Bystander, Accidentally Shot.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 5.—During a street duel here Tuesday between J. M. Chittim, known as the Texas Cattle King, and W. W. Jones, a cattleman and banker at Beeville, H. S. Elwell, a traveling man of Milwaukee, Wis., chanced within range and was accidentally killed. The bullet, it is said, was fired from Chittim's gun. Chittim was placed in jail charged with murder. Elwell worked for the H. C. Miller Co., stationers of Milwaukee. From letters in his possession it appears he has a brother in Sheboygan. Neither of the participants was injured.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT.
ALTON B. PARKER.
of New York.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.
HENRY G. DAVIS.
of West Virginia.

FOR CONGRESS--
HON. SOUTH TRIMBLE,
of Franklin County

FOR APPELLATE JUDGE,
JUDGE JAMES E. CANTRILL.
of Scott County.

CHAIRMAN ERNST's threat to put every rascally Republican politician in the 11th District in the penitentiary will not, if carried into execution, leave enough voters in Hunter's Bailwick to stand up and be counted.

The complexion of the next House of Representatives may depend upon the vote in Kentucky. There is no disaffection in any district and with the exception of the Eleventh District, the entire delegation should be Democratic.

HENRY WATTERSON is doing the best work of his life in supporting the Democratic ticket. His articles on Judge Parker have a distinct value because they come of personal knowledge of the man. They recall Mr. Watterson's able leadership of the Tilden campaign when as a young man he won his spurs as a political manager. Not only in its editorial columns but in its news department the Courier-Journal is covering in the most interesting fashion every important feature of the National contest.

ROOSEVELT was formerly a member of the Civil Service Commission and is prouder of his record in that respect than almost anything he has done save Cow Punching in the West and that famous charge of San Juan Hill. But he is, both blind and deaf to the frequent infractions of the Civil Service Law in this and other States. Federal office holders in Kentucky are being openly assessed for a Corruption Fund with which to help elect Roosevelt, but not one word of protest comes from the White House.

PIERPONT MORGAN is strong for Roosevelt. He believes that the country will go to the devil in a hand basket if the Rough Rider is not elected. Under the sacred protective tariff steel rails sell in this country at $28 a ton while in foreign markets the same rail sells for from $18 to $22 a ton. Morgan was the organizer of the steel trust and this discrimination of the tariff has made him millions. Naturally he is for Roosevelt and for the perpetuity of a policy that will continue to enrich him.

GODFREY HUNTER through the machinations of the Federal Office holding ring has been defeated for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Eleventh district. It is not easy for a Democratic newspaper to grow enthusiastic over Hunter. He has shown himself to be a time serving, scheming trickster ever since his entrance into politics, but even paint him as black as he is and he is not any worse than the gang that has conspired to put him out of business. Its principal members are former Democrats who either hold Federal offices, or have hopes of getting their noses into the political trough.

WHEN the Republican papers find the campaign growing a little dull they attack Tom Taggart. First he has been superseded by Belmont and then Gorman has taken his place as chairman of the National Committee and then the report that he has been sent West to take charge of branch headquarters. Of course these are lies pure and simple. Taggart was made chairman of the Committee because he was the choice of the Democrats of the entire country and while there may have been some disposition among the Eastern people to have one of their own men in charge they soon learned from personal acquaintance with Tom Taggart that he is one of the coolest, ablest and most experienced leaders in National politics. There is perfect harmony among the members of the Committee and Mr. Taggart has the support and confidence of Senator Gorman, Senator Jones and all the old leaders not only the Bryan men, but of every other faction of the reunited Democracy.

THE Democrats of Kentucky must not be misled by the failure of the Republicans to make a brass band campaign. Following the example of Godfrey Hunter who led them to one of the few victories they have gained in this State they are making a Gum Shoe fight all along the line. In every Congressional District where the vote is close they are trying to make a combination with the Populists and where that is not possible they are bringing out Populist candidates in the hope of withdrawing enough votes from the Democrats to elect the Republican nominee.

They have permission from the National Committee to retain all the money they can raise in this State, and to that end have made a descent upon the Federal Office Holders and are now in possession of the biggest corruption fund they have had in years. Wherever money is needed it will be forthcoming and the Democrats can prepare for a vigorous undercover fight.

Card From W. W. Shropshire.

Owing to the illness of my wife, I am unable to see all the voters of Bourbon in the interest of my race for Representative, and take this method of informing them that I am in the race to stay, and ask my friends to remember me on election day and do all they can for me.

Respectfully,
W. W. SHROPSHIRE.

Paved Streets Around the Court House.

On yesterday, the Fiscal Court appointed the Turnpike Committee to confer with the contractors building Main street in regard to paving the street around the Court House. The Committee was given power to act and it is to be hoped it will act at once. This is a much needed improvement as it would simply be awful to have the streets on each side of the new building in the present condition after Main street is completed.

WANTED.—Plain sewing and comforts. MRS. HENRY MITCHELL.

COMPLETED.—My cloak room has just been completed and is ready for the ladies. My stock of tailored suits, cloaks, jackets, raincoats, etc., is well and up-to-date. The ladies are invited to call before buying. HARRY SIMON.

Transfers in Real Estate.

James Connelly sold to Dan Isgrig a double cottage of eight rooms, in East Paris for $1,200 cash.

J. W. Lancaster sold to L. Mussinon a cottage on Ferguson street for $1,200 cash.

On yesterday, A. Shanker purchased of Mrs. Mary Griffith the store-room on Main street, now occupied by Joe Josselson, for $2,500. There is two rooms in rear and two over the store-room.

About the New Streets.

There are rumors afloat that we are liable not to have Main street finished the coming winter, and that there is about to be an injunction suit filed against the contractors, etc. We tried to trace them down and found that the facts are about these. The parties that are now doing the work on the streets are sub-contractors and are going ahead nicely, but are unable to hear from the original contractor in Indianapolis in regard to the bituminous top that goes on the street. He does not pay any attention to letters or telegrams, and the material has never been shipped from Indianapolis. It is believed though by the sub-contractors that it will certainly be here in next few days. The city, of course, has a good bond from the contractor, but that is not the thing, it is the delay that will cause the dull trade with our merchants as it is impossible for their customers to get to their places of business. If we are informed correctly two squares were to be finished at a time so as not to block the street. There is now eight squares of the street blocked—no traffic at all on these squares and if the material for the finishing touches does not reach here in the next twenty-four hours, it looks like the whole of Main street will be blocked. The sub-contractors say they will finish the whole job by November 1st if this bituminous top arrives in a few days.

We understand if it is not here in the next twenty-four hours, the city officials will stop further work until it does arrive. COMPLETE LINE.—Harry Simon is showing a complete line of fine tailor-made suits at low prices. 1t

An Enjoyable Affair.

The entertainment given Wednesday evening by the Hibernian Lodge to the ladies of the Church of the Annunciation, who so liberally assisted them at their picnic, was pronounced by those present as one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind ever given in Paris.

The entertainment was given in Lavin & Connell's building, the second and third floors being used.

After twelve interesting games of progressive euchre, a sumptuous lunch was served the guests by the popular caterer, Mr. Sammy Brannon.

The prizes were awarded as follows: On second floor, Mrs. A. J. Gorey, ladies' first prize, a handsome vase, Miss Gertrude Welsh, consolation prize.

Mr. Edward Burke, gents' first prize, a box of cigars, A. J. Gorey, consolation prize, pipe.

First floor, Miss Ella O'Neill, first prize, vase, Miss Mary Callahan consolation prize.

Mr. James Connelly, first prize, box of cigars, Mr. Edw. Keefe, Chicago, consolation prize, pipe.

About one hundred and fifty guests were present.

After lunch Mr. Henry Santen entertained the assembly with a few German songs, which were greatly enjoyed, after which the rooms were cleared and dancing indulged in until 3 a. m.

One of the features of the dance was the old-fashioned quadrille danced by the old married folks in real old-fashioned Irish style, led by "old man Pat McCarthy."

CUT FLOWERS.—C. T. Kenney is agent for Honaker, the Florist. Cut flowers and floral designs ordered on short notice.

Court of Claims Yesterday.

The Court of Claims was in session yesterday and a large bunch of claims allowed.

The report of the County Infirmary Committee was very complimentary to the keeper, Mr. Albert Rice, and the Committee recommended him to the Court. The expenses of the infirmary for last six months was $1,404.69; receipts, $475.83. Eleven white males and three females and eight colored males and two females are now at the infirmary—total of 24. There has been an average of 30 there with 11 deaths since last report. Average per capita for year $73.09.

Report of P. L. McCarthy, Receiver of Bonds: Par value of bonds $150,000; premium, $3,762.25. Disbursements, $51,705.90; balance on hand $102,056.95.

The above is about all of importance that was before the court. They postponed the election of county officers until Thursday, Nov. 17th, 1904, two days after county primary—we do not know why this was done, as they adjourned early and had plenty of time to elect.

NICE MACKEREL.—A large consignment of nice mess-mackerel just received. 7t LOUIS LALOSHIN.

Dr. Pritchard Dies.

Dr. T. J. Pritchard, one of the most popular and best-known physicians in West Virginia, died at his home in Huntington, Wednesday evening, aged about 46 years. The deceased is survived by his wife, nee Miss Amni Fretwell, of this county, and two sons, aged respectively 11 and 9 years. Dr. Pritchard has made frequent visits to this county, and by his courteous and gentlemanly bearing had made many warm friends. He bruised his ankle several weeks ago in getting out of his buggy and a piece of the bone had to be removed and blood poison setting in from this operation was the cause of his death.

The remains will arrive here to-day (Friday) on a special train at 12:30, and will proceed from depot to the cemetery, where short service will be held by Elder Carey Morgan.

Large Democratic Gains.

Registration day passed off quietly here and without any disturbance of any character. The Democrats were active in every precinct, which is shown by the large Democratic gains and Republican losses. The largest gain was in precinct No. 2, where the Democrats registered 221, giving them about 65 more than was ever registered before in this precinct. The result in each precinct was as follows: No. 1—Democrats, 132; Republicans, 34; Independents, 3. No. 2—Democrats, 221; Republicans, 55; Independents, 3. No. 3—Democrats, 133; Republicans, 47; Independents, 6. No. 4—Democrats, 182; Republicans, 110; Independents, 2. No. 5—Democrats, 120; Republicans, 182.

No. 6—Democrats, 56; Republicans, 132; Independents, 4. Total—Democrats, 844; Republicans, 560; Independents, 18.

It was by far the heaviest registration ever held in Paris, the Democrats showing a majority of 286. It also shows that we are ready for the enemy in November and intend to carry Bourbon county for Parker by a large majority.

LIGHT AT EVENTIDE.

'Tis eventide! The western sun
Behind the low set hills
Has sunk quite, but far above,
With afterglow it fills.
With radiant colors none can match.
The cloud-flecked, vaulted sky,
And tints with hues of softest shade
The snow peaks, where they lie.

'Tis eventide! Another day
Of life has passed away.
A day of trial, day of doubt,
A day of work and play.
But yonder on the sky of life
There shines the evening light;
Through Christ giving God's fair promises
In radiant colors bright.

'Tis eventide of life! And soon
Death's summons I shall hear.
The valley of the shadow? No!
There is no shadow there!
The way of death Christ trod before,
No peril shall I fear;
At eventide there shall be light,
My Saviour will be near.

The Hermit

A Story of the Wilderness

By CHARLES CLARK MUNN
Author of "Pocket Island," "Uncle Terry" and "Rockhaven."

(Copyright, 1903, by Lee and Shepard.)

CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

"'Twould gin him a worse scare than Nazer did, 'n' I'd be willing to lay down 'n' die jist to see Angle git her rights. She's been robbed long enough."

"She will be before I'm done with the matter," responded Martin, in his earnest way, "and it's for that purpose
we are here to-night. But I must ask you to keep this to yourself when we return," he added after a pause. "To no one in Greenvale, not even Dr. Sol, have I even hinted what I've told you
to-night."

"Ye kin trust me. I'd sorter 'spected
all along how ye'd felt toward Angle,
'n' if ever there was a girl worthy o' a good man, it's her."

A shade crossed Martin's face, for Angle's cool parting was with him still.

"How many days'll it take us to git thar," continued old Cy; "will it take long?"

"About ten days," answered Martin, after a pause; "it's 100 miles, with some hard carries." Then he filled and lit his pipe anew, pushed the embers
together, and watched the fire in silence,
his thoughts back to Greenvale and Angle.

CHAPTER XXVI.

UNEXPECTED TROUBLE.

But of that journey into the wilderness little need be said. It was like all such—a romantic, though at times
somewhat tedious, following of streams, crossing lakes and carries,
and camping when night overtook them. On the second day old Cy obtained his first sight and shot at a deer, and, as might be expected, no harm befell the deer.

"I sartnly aimed fair enough," he asserted in response to Martin's laugh,
"but the gun might 'a' wobbled a leetle.
It's bigger game 'n' I'm used to."

He made amends later, for along toward night and just as they rounded
a bend in the stream, there on the bank, with antlers held high, stood a noble buck looking directly at them.
With a quick backward stroke Jean halted the canoe, Cy raised his rifle, fired, and the deer leaped straight upward and vanished in the undergrowth.

"Never touched him!" exclaimed Martin. But with a "Not so, he one dead deer," from the more experienced Jean, he urged his canoe forward, and,
sure enough, there on the bank a trail of blood led them 100 rods into the forest and to the prize awaiting them.
"No deer jump that way 'cept he've bad hit," asserted Jean, in triumph,
and as for old Cy, it was the proudest moment of his life.

The next day they came upon a jolly party of four fellow-sportsmen, housed in a deserted lumber camp on the shore of a small lake, and halted for the usual exchange of compliments, and finally they made camp and remained near them that night. They were a typical party, jolly and full of fun, and addressed each other by most unique nicknames. The leader, a stout, florid, genial man was called Lobster Face,
the next, a thin fellow, was Herring
Bone, a short dapper little fellow responded to Brownie, and the dude of the party answered to Dead Easy.

But Martin was too anxious to solve the mystery that led him into the woods to tarry long with this pleasant party, and early the next morning pushed on. It was four days after when they saw another human being,
and one day's journey to the lake where he and Dr. Sol had found the hermit, when just as Levi and Jean had pitched the tent and started a fire two men paddled up in a canoe and landed close by.

Both were dressed as ordinary sportsmen, yet neither could be classed as a guide.

"We were about to make camp above here," explained the older, a man with short-cropped gray beard and keen eyes, "and, seeing your fire, we came down for company's sake. Hope we don't intrude."

"Not at all," answered Martin, pleasantly, and according to the code of all sportsmen, "my old friend and I also like company, and you are welcome to camp with us." Then, still following the code, he drew a flask out from the stores and passed it to them.

After this peace-offering they withdrew a few rods and began clearing a camp site. Later, when Martin and old Cy had disposed of the broiled venison, coffee and boiled potatoes Levi had provided, and lit their pipes, the newcomers joined them. And now ensued a polite word duel between Martin and the elder stranger, with each trying to obtain information without giving it. It was fruitless, as might be expected, for Martin was suspicious that these men were not the sportsmen

they claimed to be; hence he gave no information and they were as reticent.

It is a curious and yet well-known fact that two men meeting thus, will,
in a short space, form a usually correct opinion of each other's character and present plans and intentions. One may strive to evade, to assert what is false, and as the saying is, "pull wool over the other's eyes," yet it is usually futile. In this case Martin soon felt satisfied beyond doubt that these men were not here for sport, but on some secret mission they meant to conceal.

They spoke of the abundance of game
and where they had seen it, of the weather, lumbering interests, parties
they had met, and kindred subjects,
all the time striving to induce Martin to do more talking. At last he decided to try an experiment on those who he felt wished to learn his mission.

"I presume, gentlemen," he said,
"that you've been up the Moosehorn?"

The speaker of the two admitted that he had.

"Well," continued Martin, in a confidential manner, "I was up that way
last spring with a friend of mine who had never been in the woods, and one night we received a visit from a most hideous wild man. My friend saw him first and nearly died of fright, and later on I saw him glaring at us from behind a bush. If you go that way again, you may meet him."

"The next day," continued Martin, smiling at their sudden interest, "we hunted for this fellow's tracks and found he was endowed with the claws
of a panther."

It was true, and yet in an instant
Martin saw he wasn't believed.

"Did you notice horns on him also
the evening before?" came the query,
in response to this astonishing statement.

"No," answered Martin, laughing,
"nor tail either; but what I tell you is true, though I see you don't believe it."

For answer the two men looked first at one another, then at Levi and Jean reclining close by, and, rising, the

IMMEDIATE NEED OF FOOD.

speaker said to Martin, "Come over to our tent, won't you? I've something choice there I want you to sample."

It was only an excuse to obtain privacy, and evident enough to Martin,
but he little realized the shock that was coming.

"I am satisfied," said the speaker of the two men in a low voice, when the three had entered his tent, addressing Martin, "that you and your friends are gentlemen who are here on sportsmen's mission and for sport. We are on another and far different errand, but it won't do for your guides to know it for sufficient reasons. I see you mistrust us, and that is why I asked you in here." He paused, looked at his companion who nodded, and then continued, "I did hope to obtain some information from you, but see it is impossible until I make myself known.
We are officers and are looking for a murderer who has been hiding in this wilderness many years. We have heard recently that he has a cabin on one of the Musquacow lakes, and we are bound that way. Every guide who comes into this region is in league
against us to protect this murderer,
and for that reason I could not speak freely before yours."

Then Martin, listening, almost gasped for breath at this admission.
This peaceful old hermit who taught squirrels to love him, and whom he believed to be Amzi Curtis—a murderer! Impossible!

"You are wrong, gentlemen," he said
in a positive tone, "wholly wrong, and I know it. I found that hermit you are after last spring, and he never did or never would harm a fly out of malice."

Then he told, as if pleading for himself, what manner of man this hermit
was, and beyond that, whom he surmised him to be.

"No, no, gentlemen," he said in conclusion, "this old fellow is a poor halfdemented man whom my friend and myself are going to call on, and I know he is not the one you want."

But somehow his pleading and profuse explanation failed to convince.
"I don't doubt you believe what you say and are honest," was the response,
"but I still think this hermit, as you call him, is the chap we want."

And Martin, returning to his own camp-fire, felt his heart sink with a new dread sense of danger.

"Levi," he said, "do you know who those men are?"

"Game wardens, I 'spect."

"Worse than that; they are officers
on their way to arrest our old hermit
for murder."

Then Martin looked at old Cy, then
at Jean, and back to Levi in silence,
and with firm, set lips.

"Boys," he said at last, "it's a good 20-hours' paddle to the Musquacow

We have starlight and no carries—what do you say?"

For answer Levi began to draw the embers of the fire apart.

"The sooner they think we have turned in the sooner they will," he said; "'n' then we can start."

But this impending danger to the poor old hermit woke Martin's curiosity.

"Levi," he said, while they waited,
"these officers are on a wrong scent, I am sure, but are after some criminal no doubt. Do you know of any who have been or are now in hiding here in this wilderness?"

"I do," answered Levi, "but there's reasons why I don't care to speak out.
I ain't shieldin' no murderers by keepin' 'em mum. I'm jist mindin' my own business, 'n' not tellin' things that might end in my bein' a mark for a bullet some day; that is all."

"Well," responded Martin, somewhat surprised, "I think I understand your position, and it's all right. I don't want to get you into trouble, you may be sure, or to give any one away;
but at least you can tell me whether you ever heard that an escaped criminal was hiding in this wilderness. It won't go any farther, I'll give you my word."

And then Levi, much pressed, told
this story:

"I've heard thar was one, a chap by the name of McGuire, an' he had the name o' bein' a bad man. I ain't sayin'
this as a fact, only just what I heard.
He used to do smugglin' years ago down country, fetchin' rum in from the provinces, 'n' then Chinks hid in coffins, 'n' all that business. Arter that, he kept a place up to Grin'stun where lumbermen could spend thar money
middlin' quick on rum, cards, 'n' sich.
They used ter say he got most on 't,
but some on 'em made a fuss 'n' took
the law on him, 'n' then he dropped back. The next I heard he was up to St. Francis—thar's on the upper St.
John—'n' runnin' the same sort o' a dive; 'n' then he shot a warden fer
tryin' ter arrest him fer dynamitin' salmon on spawnin' beds, 'n' then he took to the woods. All this happened some years ago, 'n' thar's been a standin' offer o' $1,000 fer him ever since. I ain't heard he's been ketched, though."

"But have you an idea that the chap
we found with a bell signal last spring
was this McGuire?" put in Martin, eagerly; "did you think so then?"

"Why, I sorter guessed it might be,"
put in Levi, cautiously, "but I'd rather you wouldn't tell them wardens, if you meet 'em agin. It might make me trouble. I ain't over fond o' game wardens either, fer that matter."

Then a new light dawned on Martin.

"I won't give you away, Old Faithful," he said, "and not a hint to those wardens, you may be sure. They doubted my word just now when I was telling the truth, and I am 'agin 'em'
as much as you are. We will beat them to the old hermit's home to-night, if our paddles don't break, and when you and I part company, you will be well remembered."

CHAPTER XXVII.

A NIGHT JOURNEY IN THE WILDER-NESS.

For an hour Martin and his three faithful allies watched the other campfire from in hiding. At last it died down, the two strange men entered their tent, and, after another tedious
wait, Levi crept over to it, returned,
and in a whisper announced that they were snoring. After hearing this, it did not take long for the four to pack and quietly fold their tent like the Arab and silently steal away.

The bordering forest along the stream was a wall of almost inky darkness; its course was "but a narrow, winding rift between these walls and barely outlined by the stars. Now and then a patch of foam, caught in some eddy, lay like a prostrate ghost in waiting, tall firs leaning over it, and,
side by side, the two canoes, like two huge crocodiles slowly swimming, now crept up the stream. Not a word, not a whisper even, from the four determined men, bound on a mission of protection over an unknown old hermit
who might not, after all, deserve it.
It was a dim theory and faith in a long-range guess only on Martin's part that led him forward on that all-night journey, and yet that was Martin's way.

And what a wild night journey that was under the stars and ever on and on into the black forest!

No use to turn back—no waiting,
welcoming light ahead, but ever the same dark, forbidding wilderness, ghostly and spectral. The black current they faced, veered and twisted from side to side, ever disputing their progress; owls hooted out of swamps, loons saluted them with half-human despairing cries, when a broad lakelet
in the stream was reached, while over and anon from out the darkness, came the scream of a wildcat or panther."

Sometimes the way grew uncertain
where the stream broadened in a swamp, and here they poked into beds
of reeds, or nosed into clumps of alders, at last to find the current again and enter the forest once more. Now and then they halted to rest, fill their pipes, and exchange greetings in
"whispers, for the wilderness at night
ever awes and loud speech seems dangerous. And so on and on, hour after hour, each man patiently wielding his paddle, while backs ached, arms grew tired and eyes dim with watching, until at last a broadening lake was reached just as the gray light of coming morn drove away the darkness.

With renewed courage it was soon crossed and there, in the same "We,
and on the same sandy shore where Martin and the doctor had camped,
the canoes were drawn out and the wild night journey ended.

"We have got to sleep a little, boys,"
asserted Martin, looking into the tired faces of the rest, and especially old Cy, whose hollow eyes looked ghastly.

"I confess I'm well tired out."

"It wasn't the paddlin' that tuckered

me so much as the feelin' steady all the time," responded old Cy. "It sor-ter seemed 's tho' sum wild critter was like to jump out o' the woods any minnit."

But conversation was at a discount,
and, without waiting for tent raising,
or even cutting bough beds, each man rolled himself in his blanket and the sleep of utter exhaustion.

And what a picture greeted them two hours later when the September sun,
now well up, smiled down into that rippled lake, blue and sparkling!
Overhead a fish-hawk was circling;
across on a tall dead tree-top sat a gray forest eagle; a flock of ducks paddled to and fro along the margin of a bed of wild rice, while just above and nearer shore, stood an antlered deer
knee deep in the water.

Best of all, no sight or sound of aught human was visible.

The picture was so woodlike, so romantic, so perfect with the two canoes side by side on the sandy shore, kissed
by the ripples, it almost brought tears
to old Cy, unused to such.

"If I'd got to shut my eyes fer good,"
he said, after a long look with face upraised to where the eagle sat, "I'd like to do it right now 'n' carry this picter with me into kingdom come. I thought I knew what bein' in the woods meant, but I never did afore. Mebbe God's concluded to be good to me now I'm gittin' old. They call me an infidel in Greenvale," he added a little sadly,
"but I ain't, 'n' I never go through thick woods when it's sorter shadowy
'n' still, but I feel jist as if God was keepin' me company 'n' I'd order step light. Lookin' up at a mountain also 'feels me the same way, 'n' I jist can't help takin' my hat off."

And Martin, touched by the simple reverence of old Cy, felt a new admiration for him.

But a duty of protection and rescue lay ahead, and there was an immediate need of food. It did not take Levi long to start a fire, and while the slices of venison grew fragrant as they broiled,
the coffee mingled its aroma with the resinous odor of the forest, and the boiling potatoes sent steam aloft, all enjoyed a vigorous wash in the clear lake water.

"I think we've stolen a good march on those rascals who doubted my word," said Martin, as he peeled a potato, then, spearing a brown slice of venison off the wire broilers and dropping it into old Cy's tin plate, he secured another for himself, added, "they must have gasped for breath when they woke up and found us gone."

Taught the Teacher Something.

Dr. Vaughan, for many years head master at Harrow, once had an amusing encounter with a small boy who carried off the honors of the occasion.

A frightened child named Dodd was brought before Dr. Vaughan, charged with some dire scholastic offense.

"What is your name?" asked the master, with due severity.

"Dodd, sir," answered the trembling boy.

"Dodd! Do you spell it with one 'd' or with two?"

"No, sire, three," answered the boy.
The doctor put his head upon the desk, covered it with his hands a moment, and then dismissed the dangerous criminal with a warning.

He said afterwards: "I could no more have punished that boy than I could have flown. Nobody before ever gave me such a lesson in spelling!"—

Keene's Keen Sarcasm.

James R. Keene is a man of few words, but can be as courteous as a cavalier or as acridly sarcastic as the late Mr. Whistler. It is told that the financier was cornered in his office one day by a woman with a social economy hobby, who talked away much of his valuable time, aggravating her offense
by puncturing her remarks with, "And I know you're a very busy man." During a half hour Mr. Keene had not a single chance to get in a word, so voluble was his visitor. But in telling of a surprise she had experienced she said:

"Why, Mr. Keene, my heart was in my mouth, I couldn't speak."

"Marvelous!" exclaimed the big operator, rising, "I regret it was not my pleasure to have met you then."

He bowed her out.—Denver Republican.

Feroocious Brains.

In the old days, before the deadly magazine rifle was invented, hunting
the grizzly was a very different affair,
and no animal on the American continent was more dreaded, his fierceness and vital force when wounded filling the most reckless hunters with a wholesale dread. It was not at all unusual for a grizzly with a bullet through his heart to pursue and tear to pieces
a hunter, whose long, single-barreled,
muzzle-loading rifle, with its one lead bullet, was altogether inadequate for such a contest. It is a strange thing, too, that while the grizzly bear is an omnivorous feeder, living on anything from roots and nuts to steer and buffalo meats, he has never been known to devour human flesh.—Detroit Free

Mark Twain's Revenge.

Mark Twain tells this story of how he got even with a canny lassie who was telegraph operator at the Glasgow
end of a London line:

I had run up to Glasgow on my way to the Highlands," said Mr. Clemens,
"and stepped into a telegraph and postal station to send a dispatch to a friend in London. I asked several questions as to how long it would take,
when the message would be delivered,
etc. The girl at the desk was inclined to be snubbish, and at the third or fourth question she cut me dead.

"But I got even with her. I just sent my friend this message: 'Arrived safely. Girl here ugly and bad tempered.' And she had to send it, too!"

IN GREAT DISTRESS

VOMITING SPELLS LONG RESISTED EVERY EFFORT TO CHECK.

Mrs. Brooks Became So Weak She Thinks She Would Have Died But For Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Sarah L. Brooks, of No. 45 Lincoln Park, Chicago, Illinois, gives the following account of her cure from distressing spells of vomiting:

"For five years off and on I was treated in vain by different doctors for relief from a stomach trouble which showed itself in frequent and trying spells of vomiting. Part of the time I was able to work and again I would be confined to bed for three or four days in succession.

"My stomach was at times so delicate that it would not retain even plain water. The spells would sometimes occur at intervals of half an hour, and would leave me so weak that I would be compelled to lie down between them. I would have several of them during the night following a day of such attacks. Finally I became so weakened that I had to give up working altogether. I weighed only ninety-four pounds.

"Last January I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the Chicago daily papers and bought a box and began to use them. After I had used half a box I found that I could keep on my stomach the food I ate. I was encouraged by this and kept on using the pills for four months. At the end of that time the vomiting spells had ceased altogether and my weight went up to 142 pounds and is still growing.

"I think I surely would have died if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I sometimes vomited clear blood, and for three or four days at a time I could not eat a bite of anything. One doctor said I had chronic inflammation of the stomach, and another said my difficulty was a cancer, but none of their medicines did me any good at all. Finally I concluded that I did not have blood enough to digest my food and I began the treatment that has cured me. I can eat anything now, and have strength for all kinds of work. I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand, and I recommend them to my friends because I know they cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills agree with the most delicate stomachs and strengthen the digestive organs until they do their work perfectly. They are sold by all druggists.

YOU ALL KNOW HIM.

He's quite a well-intentioned man—but oh, it is a sin
The way that he's addicted to the vice of butting in.
He makes himself more trouble and plague other folk as well.
The scrapes it's brought him into it would never do to tell.
He never minds his business, has no time to attend
To that and other people's, and he wouldn't slight a friend.
He's proof against a snubbing, it's no earthly use to try
To make him keep his finger from the other fellow's pie.

He's trying to be helpful, you are confident of that,
He thinks that his suggestions are invariably pat.
He'll show you how to do things in the way they should be done;
He'll give you his opinions on all things beneath the sun.
Wherever people gather for discussion, though it be
Of strictly private matters, you can never make him see
By voice or tone or manner any earthly reason why
He shouldn't have a finger in their confidential pie.

And innocent about it! That's the trouble, don't you know,
Your hints are always wasted, so one hasn't any show.
I've mentioned that he never can quite comprehend a snub,
A kick would be too brutal and one cannot use a club,
And so we bear his poking and his prying as we can,
Because we know there really is no harm about the man.
But oh, he is a trial! And we're all constrained to sigh
When he comes near us eager for a finger in the pie.

HER PINK WRAPPER

By STELLA BELDING

THERE is a place where the leaves grow more profoundly green in summer, redder and more golden in autumn, and where the brilliant eternity of sky is of a deeper sapphire hue. Thus is slumberous Greenton Valley.

Here a tiny cottage stood, white and rose embowered, idyllic, poetic, and charged with the gentle Virginia grace of ancient Italy. It was set in a garden laid off with academic primness. Yellow dwarf roses reared their idle, creamy heads beside such lurid effects of nature as red and white chrysanthemums; a sisterhood of passionate red dahlias flaunted away in the sunshine opposite nunlike lilies; and an infinity of little ox-eyed pansies made for borders. It was a most delectable garden indeed.

Sweet Ernestine Tebbs looked up from her gardening, prettily perplexed, as Col. Sam Raphael Bell shut the absurd toy of a white gate with an announcing click. Everything was on a doll-like, miniature scale.

Ernestine's fingers were buried in the rich, clean loam. By her side a huge pair of shears lay, the only thing of consequential size about the place. She raised her hand and pushed back her hair from her forehead, and settled the flapping proportions of her garden hat on the crown of her head. The colonel thought gardening such a pretty, pretty pastime.

"I see you've had your shutters painted," remarked the colonel, with originality.

"Um-um, yes," faltered Ernestine, with a streak of the same element.

Then she added, softly: "I did it."

The colonel laughed his hearty, regimental laugh, and flushed rather under the healthy tan of his skin.

"I must confess you made a striking success of it," he said, letting his eyes wander over the six gingerbread windows of this doll house. Everything was so delightfully, ridiculously, absurdly neat and tidy and clean and prim. And the girl before him was remarkably pretty, with her fresh morning face, her silky fawn-brown hair, and her long, flowerlike hands that now lay loosely clasped over her dimpled knees.

The morning wrapper she wore was worthy of being called an invention. And it was a product of her own imagination. It was crisp and very pink and clean, with an infinity of loops and bows and ruffles, and last, but not least, a honeycomb yoke and peekaboo sleeves. Ernestine was also the author of her hat.

This delicious precision and tidiness about the doll house was balm upon the cleanly, order-loving soul of Col. Bell.

"I'm really just curious enough to want to know how you managed, Miss Ernestine," he said, expanding his military chest with the clean, fresh air of Greenton Valley, as he seated himself beside Ernestine.

She bit in her under lip. There was an almost dangerous sweetness lurking about the corners of her round mouth.

Suddenly she laughed outright, and drooped her head, burying her charming, dimpling face in her rosy hands.

"Oh! I'm almost ashamed to tell you," she said, hardly audible. "It's so ridiculous, but then it seems to me that everything that happens during these summers here is ridiculous."

"Miss Ernestine," said the colonel, with unction, "I promise to keep perfectly sober."

"Well, then, I'll tell you."

She sighed a delectable little dirling sigh that thrilled straight through the colonel and finally lodged in his heart.

The yellow, impalpable sunshine beat down upon them, and over them brooded the eternity of lustrous sapphire sky.

"You see it's just this way," began Ernestine, "there are only two of us, of course, and my sister, being past mistress of expedients and strategy, suggested that we make a stepladder of our household goods. So we piled chairs and tables up from the ground and down from the windows, and I stood on these and, held to the frame while I painted."

The colonel glanced up at the trim, muslin curtained, gingerbread windows that looked out of the wall like three staring eyes slightly askew.

"But why didn't you take the shutters off to paint them, Miss Ernestine?" exclaimed the colonel, inspirationally.

Ernestine extended her pretty hands in a tender little movement of appeal to the colonel. She pressed her glowing morning face down among the cool leaves and blossoms of the chrysanthemums.

"Oh, don't tell me, at this late day, dear colonel, that shutters come off!"

She was very tempting as she sat there in her trim little garden, her bright head catching and holding the sunlight like a jewel. She herself was like a rare gem, on which one discovered new and beautiful facets at every turn. Her charms were very penetrating, very many, very appealing.

The colonel took counsel with himself. He intended telling a falsehood, he also intended giving it away with the great white light of truth.

"No, Miss Ernestine," he said, "I think you were quite right. It has always been my theory that shutters look better afterward when painted on the house. I do not know why; but that has always been my experience."

She looked up at him gratefully, and he felt repaid.

Presently the colonel left, followed by his Irish setter Lodusky. For quite a few minutes after on the homeward walk he could see nothing very distinctly but sweet Ernestine's graceful figure, the peculiar poise of her head, the charming gestures of her hands, the dreamy, German sweetness of her face. And this delightful picture was framed in a border of dancing light and shadow, chrysanthemums, dwarf roses, and delectable, inspiring cleanliness and order.

The colonel had attained a certain age. He had often seen his sisters in the matutinal hours display themselves in white, perhaps picturesque disarray one might call it, if one were disposed to be lenient. The colonel wished to commit himself not swiftly. He desired his future wife to be his most dainty, his most beautiful, plaything and idol. There was, perhaps a dash of Bagdad and the far east in the make-up of Col. Bell. He would call on Miss Ernestine very early to-morrow morning; and then, perhaps—

"Is it eight o'clock yet?" yawned Ernestine, turning over in bed and presenting a white rampart of back to her sister's sleepy face.

"Yes," came the muffled answer.

Ernestine rose, yawned again, pressed her hands to her frowzy head and stretched herself luxuriously, blinking hard to open her eyes. She sent out one small foot to feel about on the floor for the badly down-trodden slippers that lay hidden under the pile of ruffled bedclothes that had slipped to the floor during the night.

Ernestine groaned audibly, the room was so intolerably, deplorably untidy.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Ernestine crossly, then stopped suddenly as a rather sick looking wrapper came down over her head and shut off utterance. "Do get up, Anne, everything is in such a nasty mess."

She kicked a roll of soiled towels into a corner, and threw a bunch of withered roses into the brimming slop basin. When the shutters were flung open she stepped for a moment before the mirror. In it she saw a most dowdy little figure. She nearly laughed out loud. Her beautiful hair was tumbled about her shoulders and standing absurdly at sixes and sevens. Traces of yesterday morning's chocolate adorned her wrapper front.

"I certainly am a little—fright!" she laughed.

She thought languidly of the transformation that would take place when she donned the fresh pink wrapper now lying across the back of a chair in the next room, and of the effect of a knot of young rosebuds at the belt.

The beat of footsteps sounded in the hall. The girls stopped short, and their eyes met. They came upsettingly near, then ceased. The sisters still stood transfixed, looking at each other.

An inquiring, long, brown nose was softly protruded within the crack of the door.

"Lodusky!" screamed Ernestine Tebbs, running to him and beginning to pat his head vigorously.

"Col. Bell!" ejaculated her sister. Ernestine had long since raised quick costume to the level of a science.

Very shortly she emerged distractingly pretty, captivating, immaculate as the morning, and in time to gather a few blossoms for her throat as she tripped down the gravel walk to meet the unregenerate colonel. She was as fresh and sweet as one of her own favorite blush roses that bloomed at her feet, as she faced the colonel in that most delectable of pink morning wrappers. She looked up at him, archly, coyly, from out the shadow of her great garden hat.

"Good morning," he said, abruptly. "Miss Ernestine, pray pardon such an early morning call, but—"

She put out her soft, white hand quickly and laid it on his, pressing it gently.

"Dear colonel," she said, "I find the early, early morning the most beautiful part of the day. Why apologize?"

She let her hand drop. His own still tingled, he felt her little fingertips resting in his palm. The colonel's face was overspread with a not conventional beatitude, for had she not stood the supreme test, and come out with not only flying, but scrupulously clean, colors. He twined his arm about her, drawing her into the shadow of a tree near by, and whispored a few hurried words in her ear. Lodusky lay on the gravel and stared at them with an unfathomable look in his eyes.

It was very quiet, not a leaf stirred in slumberous Greenton valley.—National Magazine.

THE KEGS WERE LIGHTER.

Dr. Lorimer's Easy Explanation of an Apparently Difficult Performance.

Rev. George C. Lorimer, whose death at Aix was recently reported, was the main impetus that carried on the building of Boston's magnificent Tremont temple, and Dr. Lorimer's wit, sincerity and imaginative sympathy made him a great favorite with the students of Harvard during his residence in Boston.

At Cambridge, one day, according to a current story, an undergraduate asked the opinion of Dr. Lorimer on drinking—moderate drinking.

"I am opposed to it," the clergyman said. "It is perilous. It frequently leads to drunkenness. In fact, most drunkards were moderate drinkers first."

"Naturally, most liquors and wines, though, are strengthening, aren't they?" the student asked.

Dr. Lorimer smiled.
"Beer," he said, "is very strengthening. I have known young men to have sent to their rooms large kegs of beer that they could not budge at first, and a day or two later they would be able to lift these kegs with ease."

Insurmountable.
An indignant letter dictated by a clever old gentleman runs thus: "Sir, my stenographer, being a lady, cannot take down what I think of you. I, being a gentleman, cannot express it; but you, being neither, can readily divine it."—Argonaut.

Two severe cases of Ovarian Trouble and two terrible operations avoided. Mrs. Emmons and Mrs. Coleman each tell how they were saved by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so pleased with the results obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it."

"I suffered for more than five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpleasant discharge, a great weakness, and at times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself once more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true, grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't dally with medicines you know nothing about, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and take my word for it, you will be a different woman in a short time."—Mrs. LAURA EMMONS, Walker-ville, Ont.

Another Case of Ovarian Trouble Cured Without an Operation.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For several years I was troubled with ovarian trouble and a painful and inflamed condition, which kept me in bed part of the time. I did so dread a surgical operation. "I tried different remedies hoping to get better, but nothing seemed to bring relief until a friend who had been cured of ovarian trouble, through the use of your compound, induced me to try it. I took it faithfully for three months, and at the end of that time was glad to find that I was a well woman. Health is nature's best gift to woman, and if you lose it and can have it restored through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel that all suffering women should know of this."—Mrs. LAURA BELLE COLEMAN, Commercial Hotel, Nashville, Tenn.

It is well to remember such letters as above when some druggist tries to get you to buy something which he says is "just as good." That is impossible, as no other medicine has such a record of cures as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; accept no other and you will be glad.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

$5000 FORFEIT If we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness, Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: 'I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim.' No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Oberdorfer's drug store.

Wheat Wanted.

Before selling your wheat, see us or call phone No. 84. We will buy at all stations on F. & C. and L. & N. railroads. Will pay the highest market price, or will store your wheat at Centerville, Shawhan, Millersburg or Paris. Have plenty of sacks.

Society's New Game.

"Trail" has taken society by storm. It is something new, something different. "Trail," as the name implies, is founded on a popular hunting sport, is played with fifty-three fine cards in four colors, representing a fox to be chased and caught, and four packs of hounds of thirteen each.

"Trail" has a constantly recurring interest for players as they perfect their playing from evening to evening, in marked contrast to certain recent boisterous games that bore the players at the end of an hour.

With the one pack six other splendid, new, copyright games can be played. Two Educational games, and two games of Fun, making it suitable for all members of a family.

"Trail" can be had of dealers or sent post-paid, 75c gilt-edge, plain 50c. Rules for the seven games free.
